Beltane 2016

Donations Welcome

*The Goddess Temple,
2-4 High Street,
Glastonbury, BA6 9DU
www.goddess temple.co.uk*

As the wheel turns, and we journey deeper into the mysteries with each passing season, Beltane always opens me to the experiences of love and aliveness. I hear Rhiannon's song in the voices of the dawn chorus and in the evening vesper of blackbirds singing the winged beloved home to nest. I see Her joyous dance of life in Her sky dancing swallows that return to our shores, inviting us all to feel, to move, to celebrate and express our love and gratitude for life's gift.

Since the Spring Equinox, Her fire delicately colours the Earth, softening stark edges with a haze of purple promising enlivening leaves that becomes the bright liquid green our hungry eyes drink in after months of winter grey. Feasting on colour, the celebration of all the shades of life emerging triumphant out of the depths of death and dreaming, the magic of Life seeks for expression and dances.

The Temple is once more dressed in red and ready for ceremony; sacred marriage,

Rhiannon Room, Goddess House

moon lodge, red and white tent, sensual sound baths and embodiments, as well as a place of meeting like-minded people to build community that manifests as Love-in-Action in the world.

A new example of our Goddess community coming together to manifest beauty and love is the Goddess House, a recently opened centre for healing, wellbeing and Goddess awareness. In an amazingly short time, through the work of love of many hands and hearts, a place of splendour and potential has been birthed. You can find the Goddess House on Magdalene Street. Do visit and gift your self a healing or wellness treatment, or join a group or event held there.

Our Goddess Temple here in Glastonbury is a beacon of Goddess Love in the world as well as the open temple space for everyone who chooses to come and be held by the Love and presence of Goddess, to celebrate, to be healed, to rest, to experience and honour Nolava of Love: Lady of Avalon at Beltane and Goddess Rhiannon; Lover Queen of the May.

Regardless of what our life journey has brought us, the Goddess of Love brings us the possibility to surrender into the truth of Her Loving presence and to really 'see' the soul gift of love that this precious life is. Ribbioned maypole dances and leaping of fires are the invitation to become conscious of how love is wanting to manifest through us into the world.

In writing this editorial I asked Rhiannon what She wanted to have expressed. What came through and made my heart leap was the inquiry 'what would love do?' It is difficult to stay committed to experiencing Her Love and the practices of peace, when you are experiencing heart break, illness or are in fear. When acts of terror, great suffering, war and violence are profoundly current and trigger reactions and rebellion. When fear, the opposite to love, is spun and runs wild, it is so easy to get sucked into the re-active places of anger, dis-empowerment, hopelessness and paranoia.

But it is precisely in days of fear and sadness that it becomes more radical and necessary to listen and respond to Rhiannon as Goddess of Love as She asks us at all times to place first and foremost in all our thought and actions what Love would do. This is not an easy task. Rather than giving in to inertia, overwhelm, hopelessness or reactivity to the pull of the patriarchal ways of violence, I see it as part of the role and lived commitment of people of the Goddess to choose to enhance, help build, support and empower Love-in-Action. Keeping our heart open, feeling it all and choosing what love would do in each moment. May we be the change we long for this Beltane, in this now, and may Her Love radiate through us for the greater good of all.

A Beltane Tale

by Janet Bliss
Sister of Avalon

May ran down the path that led into the woods. She was very angry! It was her birthday tomorrow but everyone in her family was too busy to give her a party, take her out somewhere special or even make her a nice lunch or tea.

Her Dad would be out with the Hobby Horse and then up before dawn and not back until midnight. Her Mum and her older sister would be with the Morris sides, dancing their way around most of West Somerset. They would end up celebrating with Dad and the other "sailors" in the Old Ship Aground and walk home with Dad long after May was in bed and asleep.

Tomorrow her Grandma and Granddad would be helping organise the children from the First School who would do the Maypole Dancing and they would have May's younger brother with them. Her other grandparents lived further away and were too busy to come and see her on her birthday as they were going to a Jack in the Green party in the evening.

May was even angrier once she'd thought of everything everyone else would be doing on her birthday. Why did she have to be born on the 1st of May? And why did she have to be called May? What was she meant to do all day? Why didn't anyone care about her? May slumped down with her back to a tree and wept.

It was the tinkling of the bells that caught her attention first and she lifted her head and looked around. She couldn't see anything so slumped back down. Tinkle, tinkle there it was again, little bells ringing. She tried to ignore them. Tinkle, tinkle, tinkle! They were drawing nearer, and she could hear little footsteps too. The bells and the footsteps stopped in front of her, "Well and what have we here?" said a rich voice with a slightly unusual accent "What are you weeping for on this fine May Eve?"

"Its none of your business but for your information I'm not weeping I just have sore eyes", said May. Then she opened those sore eyes to see a little figure about three feet tall dressed in shades of green with a jacket, breeches, long socks, boots and a cap. He had a red and white kerchief tied around his neck and carried a silver stick with bells tied to it. "Oh my goodness" May exclaimed "What are you?"

"Well I'm not a what but a who thanks very much, I'm the herald of May" "The what", said May "Why do I need a herald" "No not your herald" he said "I'm the herald of May" "Yes that's me, I'm May" she said, "and perhaps I do need you after all", she thought.

He rocked back on his heels and threw back his head and roared with laughter. After what seemed to May like a very long time he stopped laughing and the bells stopped tinkling. "Well and what do we say to that" he said and winked at May. "I take it your name is May pretty lady". "Yes" said May "but I wish it wasn't" "Well now be careful what you wish for" he said. "Now tell old Pat exactly what the trouble is m'dear" he said sitting down beside her. So May told him all about it being her birthday and everybody being too busy to take any notice of her.

Pat said, "And what are you meant to be doing now?" "Nothing, just keeping out of everyone's way until tea time". "Well you had better come along with me", said Pat. "I have to make sure all these trees are awake and ready for May Day you see.

So off they set, Pat shaking his silver branch to set the bells tinkling and May skipping down the path with him. At each tree he stopped and did a little dance or sang a song and then touched the tree's trunk and listened. "That's the birch awake, she'll keep order, she may be slender but her branches carry a lot of authority oh yes, just think of the schoolmaster's rod" said Pat. "What rod" asked May "do you mean a cane? They aren't allowed to have those any more". Pat raised an eyebrow but carried on through the wood.

"Now this is a mighty oak we'll need to wake him for he'll be needed for the battle" said Pat. "What battle?" asked May "I don't know about any battles tomorrow" "There's always a battle on May Day" said Pat. "We'll look for his opponent soon".

"Oh good the Hawthorn is already awake just look at her beautiful flowers. You'll be able to come and pick plenty for your house tomorrow" "What are you talking about" exclaimed May, "don't you know its really bad luck to bring them into the house". Pat frowned at her but carried on down the path.

"Oh no look at this poor holly, how is he to fight?" "Still they all have to be woken, perhaps he'll keep out of the way and stay here with his lady" May couldn't contain herself at that "I'm not a child you know, I'll be eleven tomorrow, and I know better than to believe trees fighting and walking around in the woods."

"Well, well well" he said, "Now when you told me about your Dad and the Hobby Horse, your Mum and sister and the Morris, your Gran and Granddad and the Maypole and your other Grandparents and Jack o'The Green, I really believed you must have been taught about the old ways and the folk of the forests and the hollow hills." He shook his head slowly "But I see now this is not so."

"Now come and sit with me awhile for we have time a'plenty yet" So they sat on a fallen trunk and May reached into her pocket for a small bar of chocolate to share with Pat.

"Now" said Pat "Do you know about the Sidhe?" "You mean the faeries" said May "But they're just made up for little children". "Are they" said Pat "Are they indeed" He shook his head, put two fingers in his mouth and whistled, "Come on, you can come out now."

From behind a tree trunk a head popped out followed by a little man, a little smaller than Pat and dressed in brown. "May, this is a wood elf, he's one of the Sidhe" "Oh hello I didn't mean to say you weren't real but I didn't know" said May. "That's ok my name is Beth and I look after the birch tree" May giggled "But that's a girl's name" she said. "Oh no, it means birch in an old language" the wood elf replied as he sat down beside them.

"Each of twenty types of trees, shrubs and plants have a name in the old language and we wood elves use one of those names and look after all the trees of that type in our wood. Each May Day and each Samhain, that's Halloween to you, there is a battle between an oak and a holly to decide which tree will be king of the forest. At Samhain, the holly wins because it still has green leaves but on May Day the oak is victorious, because its the largest tree." Beth said.

"Pat, as Herald of the May, must wake all the trees in time for their role on May Day." "Then on May Day morning his work is done and he can enjoy all the frolicking and feasting he likes"

"Also on May Eve the Heralds of May must make sure that Herne the Hunter has left the forests so that the Green Man, who you also call Jack of the Green, can come to protect all the animals in the forests while they give birth and raise their young."

"So you see little May, May Day is about much more than that Hobby Horse that scared off the Danes or the Morris sides and their sticks and handkerchiefs," said Pat. "But at the same time they remind us of the old ways too. The Morris men and women wear bells to remind you of the Herald of May. The Hobby Horse visits every place in the town just like I visit every tree in the forest. The maypole with its bright ribbons reminds us of the lengthening and shortening of the light but its also like all the trees with their beautiful flowers. The Morris men and their staves remind you of the battle between the oak and the holly as well as the battle between dark and light."

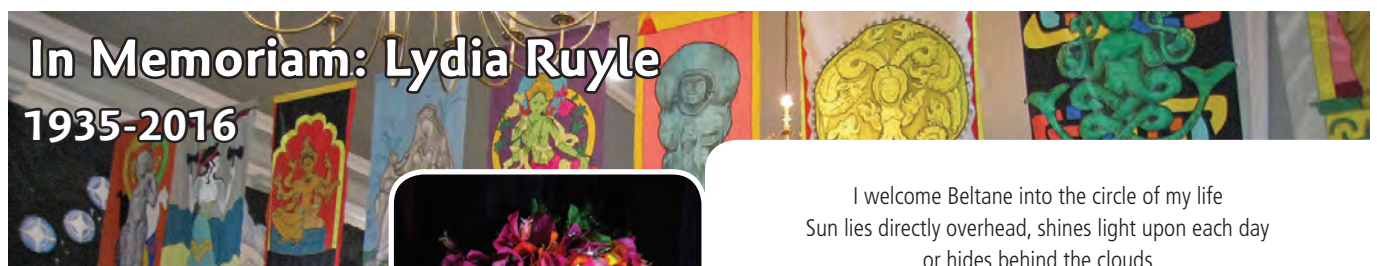

"So why did you think I would take hawthorn boughs into the house?" asked May. "Well in the old days sweethearts would go out to cut the flowering boughs and bring them home," said Pat. "Some people thought that this made them too excited so they told everybody it was unlucky to cut the boughs and take them home".

"So why does all this happen?" asked May. "Who told you all to do these things?" "Oh" said Pat "That's easy to answer, we're all a part of the Great Goddess and at Beltane, what you call May Day, She is in Her Lover aspect and so she loves to dance and see the lovely flowers and the animals getting ready to have their young and the trees awake too. So we know its time for us to do our part to make all that happen."

"Are we part of the Great Goddess too?" asked May. "Well now I think you are at that," said Pat. "I think you are".

"Oh" said May "Thank you so much for telling me all this, now I know how special my birthday is I shan't mind being on my own so much. I know now that my family are all doing things that will always remind me of what you have told me."

"I'll walk to the edge of the wood with you May," said Beth. "Whenever you are lonely or sad you can always come into the wood. Even if you don't see us remember we'll be here and will be watching over you. Goodnight little May" "Goodnight Beth and Pat" May called as she left the wood but although they didn't answer she knew they were there.

In Memoriam: Lydia Ruyle 1935-2016

Lydia Ruyle, one of our dearest Goddess Temple and Goddess Conference Soul Sisters and Friends passed to the embrace of the Goddess and the Great Beyond on 26th March 2016. We are holding her in a Circle of Love here in Glastonbury's Goddess Temple as she moves into the Otherworld. Lydia was an artist scholar who lived in Greeley, Colorado in the USA. She is the creator of the wonderful Goddess GIRLS, her Goddess Icon banners, which display images of ancient Goddesses from around the world in vivid colours. Her wide knowledge of Goddess and her support for important Goddess archaeological sites, such as Catal Hoyuk and Gobekli Tepe in Anatolia, mean that she holds a special place in our hearts.

Lydia began to create the GIRLS when she was 60 years old and first brought them to the Goddess Conference in 1998, when we hung the bright banners on the walls of the Assembly Rooms and processed them through the town in our 'Goddess in the Cart' procession. This tradition has continued every year to the present day, with the GIRLS weaving a pattern of colour and inspiration across the land for all to see. Lydia was a vibrant Goddess woman, full of energy and intelligence and and a life well-lived. We will miss her presence at the Goddess Conference, and in the other places where we knew her. I love you, Lydia. Be well in the arms of our Goddess.

I welcome Beltane into the circle of my life
 Sun lies directly overhead, shines light upon each day or hides behind the clouds or warms the other hemisphere,
 but always here in cosmic shroud.
 Sun flares heat our lives – so many ways of love,
 passion driving work and play,
 dreams energized into activity, ideas transform in beauty,
 usefulness stirs up the pot of alchemy,
 coloured silks left for posterity
 for all to see. Eternity.
 Love's fire burns through noon of day, summer of a year, youth of life, blossoms flowers, vegetables, fruit. All sentient beings grow empires, nest, give root to generations hence, inspirations, aspirations of hope.
 Fire greets our Beltane time.
 We jump her flames with vows of love, dance around the coloured pole delighting every pace, passion burns in every shadowed space, alive in every heart.
 As maiden-mother turns the wheel to summer,
 She fulfills spring vows,
 makes her pledge of harvest for the table in the Fall.
 The heat of flame can feed us all, if only we could see what must be seen, hear what must be heard.
 What must be loved.
 And when I have spoken my last word, love will transform to dust
 the body I have occupied and energize my spirit that will ascend to burn again
 into another play, another life,
 another Beltane dance.

In honour of dear Lydia Ruyle, Blessed Be.

Creating Goddess House

by Kathy Jones

Goddess House is a lovely Georgian house situated in the heart of Glastonbury on Magdalene Street, overlooking the grounds of Glastonbury Abbey. It is the newest adventure being created by the Priest/esses and Melissae of Glastonbury's Goddess Temple. Goddess House is both an Holistic Natural Health Centre, and a Goddess Educational Centre with beautiful workshop spaces and group rooms. Over the last few weeks we have been painting and decorating this lovely house. Lots of people are helping, each person offering their skills and creativity to this Motherworld venture. Something very beautiful happens when people come together to put their love and energy towards a good cause, in this case the creation of a Healing Temple, which will offer healing therapies of many different kinds to people in need.

Lots of people have helped to clear out wires left by the previous tenants, filled holes, sanded down and painted the many walls of the building. We have also received generous gifts of chairs, tables, carpets, kitchen equipment, cups, plates, pots and pans, as well as images and statues of Goddess. This is a big venture and we are very blessed.

Goddess House Healing offers a welcoming space, where visitors can receive a wide range of natural healing therapies from experienced professional therapists and healers. Our trained practitioners are here to help you receive the healing care and attention you need and deserve for your wholeness and well-being. Among the therapies we offer are several forms of holistic massage, including Aromatherapy, Lomi Lomi, Thai, Pregnancy and Sacral Abdominal massage. We offer several forms of spiritual healing including Goddess, Soul, Crystal, Sound, Shamanic and Reiki Healing. We have practitioners in Reflexology, Aromatherapy Facials, Ear Candles, Advanced Bowen Therapies, Counselling, Life Coaching, NLP, Nutrition, Bio-Resonance, as well as Tarot, Psychic Reading, 1-1 Yoga and Meditation.

Goddess House is also part of the educational outreach of Glastonbury Goddess Temple, and here we hold Priest/ess Training courses and offer public daytime, evening and weekend classes in Goddess spirituality, crafts, healthy eating, etc.

It is extraordinary that the majority of people have actually never heard of Goddess, Ask anyone who God is and most people will have an answer. Ask who Goddess is and for most people she is a woman in a television advert. And Goddess is so much more than this.

She is the earth under our feet, the water that flows in our bodies, in streams and rivers. She is the fire in the core of our bodies, in the centre of the Earth and in the Sun that gives life to our planet. She is the air we breathe, and She is the space between all things. She is the One and the Many and She has ten thousand, thousand faces. She is the Source and the Return.

Yet She has been left out of our usual educational systems, despite the fact that She was honoured and adored for tens of thousands of years in the past, as evidenced by the images of Her which have been found at archaeological sites. One of the fundamental purposes of Glastonbury's Goddess Temple is to bring knowledge and awareness of Goddess back into our human consciousness.

Our larger and smaller private Rooms are available for hire to local and visiting groups, who wish to hold their events in a specially dedicated Goddess environment.

Goddess House Healing

As you step through the the doors to Goddess House you enter into sacred space. Less than a week after our doors opened to the general public I have witnessed such connection, tears and openness. Her energy spirals around the house, embracing each room named in honour of Bridie, Artha, Rhiannon, Domnu, Ker, Bambha, Kerredwyn and Danu. The Goddess House has been co-created with an eye for beauty; draped and decorated by our amazingly generous Goddess loving community. All are honoured, called in and channeled by her Priestesses, Therapists and Healers. We combine the ancient temples with modern techniques and therapies, weaving together sound, colour, crystals, the elements... each treatment is totally personalised, individual, intuitively guided for each person's healing. We are creating a new way of working, a weave of sacred space blessing each client, as well as giving fantastic treatments. Each session is held with a specific stream of Goddess energy, which makes us totally unique!

Whether you are in Avalon for a holiday, a course or you are seeking healing, come and spend some time with us at Goddess House Healing.

Healing is fundamental in the world now. We all need healing. At Goddess House Healing we have created a haven for healing, teaching, love and support for individuals and groups. Goddess House is the manifestation of energies woven by Kathy and Mike Jones, and Angie Twydall. It is more than a healing centre, more than just a space to rent and run workshops. It is the centre of Goddess, the hub for Goddess Healing energy, our sacred space. We are set in the heart chakra of the world, in the centre of Avalon. www.goddesshousehealing.co.uk
